AREAS OF RESEARCH INTEREST

French Phonology and Morphology
 Canadian French
 Old French
 Romance Linguistics
 Historical Linguistics
 Phonological Theory

CURRENT RESEARCH ACTIVITY

My current research focuses on French phonology, specifically on Canadian pronunciation. I have completed fieldwork on the French variety spoken in the Peace River region of Alberta, and am analysing this in the context of the general structure of Canadian French. This, in turn, is part of an international project, La phonologie du français contemporain (PFC): usages, variétés et structure (<http://www.projet-pfc.net/>), a project under the direction of Marie-Hélène Côté (Université Laval), Jacques Durand (ERSS-UMR5610, Université de Toulouse-Le Mirail), Chantal Lyche (Université d'Oslo) and Bernard Laks (Université de Paris X), for which I was the initial Canadian coordinator. The broader aims of this project include an examination of the pronunciation of French in a wide variety of communities throughout La Francophonie, the testing of a number of phonetic and phonological theories, the exploitation of various techniques of language processing, and the establishment of a major new database on French phonology to complement those already available.

2. Electronic resources (non-refereed)

Lexique d'ancien français. (1999) A database of some 48,000 Old French words compiled from the Altfranzösisches Wörterbuch of A. Tobler and E. Lommatzsch (continued by H.H. Christmann), Stuttgart: Franz Steiner Verlag, 1915 ff. This database is accompanied by a search engine which allows the material to be queried by forward or inverse order with or without variant forms, by grammatical category and by orthographic composition.
